Toronto, Ontario--(Newsfile Corp. - July 9, 2026) - TempraMed Technologies Ltd. (CSE: VIVI) (FSE: 9DY) ("TempraMed" or the "Company"), a medical technology company transforming the storage and management of temperature-sensitive medications, is pleased to announce that its flagship VIVI Cap™ and VIVI Epi™ products have been accepted by Meuhedet Health Services (Meuhedet), Israel's third-largest Health Maintenance Organization (HMO), serving more than one million insured members nationwide.

The acceptance represents another significant milestone in TempraMed's institutional commercialization strategy, which is focused on driving adoption through healthcare organizations, insurers, payors, healthcare providers and government health systems rather than relying solely on traditional direct-to-consumer channels. Meuhedet operates an extensive healthcare network providing primary care, specialist care, diagnostics, pharmacy services, chronic disease management and digital healthcare solutions. Management believes its focus on innovation and integrated patient care aligns well with TempraMed's long-term vision for connected medication management through products such as VIVI Cap Smart™, which combines temperature protection with medication adherence tracking and digital patient engagement.

"The acceptance by Meuhedet to offer our products represents another important milestone in executing our institutional healthcare strategy," said Ron Nagar, Chief Executive Officer of TempraMed. "Our objective is to establish TempraMed as a global medical device provider for the safe storage of temperature-sensitive medications through healthcare systems, insurers, pharmacy networks and government organizations. We are executing on our institutional B2B strategy and are building a highly scalable commercial platform capable of reaching millions of patients through institutional healthcare channels. Our strategy is focused shifting towards working with enterprise-scale healthcare distributors that provide recurring revenue opportunities, improve patient access and support sustainable international growth."

TempraMed's commercialization strategy is centered on building long-term institutional relationships capable of delivering broad patient access, recurring product demand and reimbursement opportunities. The Company has established commercial relationships across multiple healthcare channels, including HMOs, insurers, national pharmacy distributors, medical distributors, government organizations and retail pharmacy networks.

With this addition, TempraMed products have now been accepted by two of Israel's four national HMOs—Maccabi Healthcare Services and Meuhedet—providing institutional access to approximately 4 million insured lives[1]. Combined with the Company working with Humana, one of the top five largest payors in the United States covering over 17 million lives[2], the Company continues to see meaningful traction within the institutional healthcare market.

In addition to Meuhedet, TempraMed's combined commercial distribution network includes: Humana, MMS, Maccabi Healthcare Services, as well as national retail pharmacy and e-commerce platforms including Walgreens, Walmart, Amazon and Target.
